What's new from the People's Library?

Good things come to those who DO

This month the People's Library marks both the domestic and international versions of World Book Day, celebrating a local event that promises to bring literature to life for young people and a beloved global bestselling novel that still has much to teach us 65 years after it was first published. We also look at the charity that's helping people with dementia continue to enjoy their lives and retain their sense of self, we ask whether our ability to save money is dictated by our nationality and the language we speak, we look at a time when sporting icon Gary Linkeker had to deal with failure, and we raise a glass to Ian Rees, our first Community Champion of 2025,

We Are the Champions

Ian Rees is our first Community Champion of 2025. People who know him understand why.

Turning the Page

Buying books is good, Swapping books can be even better.

When Lineker Failed

How we cope with adversity and how we respond to injustice tells us who we are

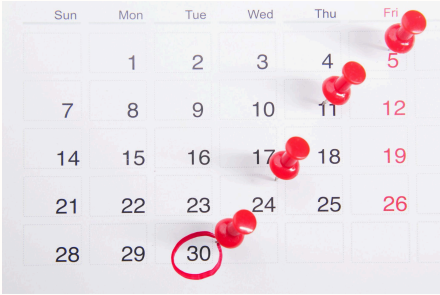

Forget Me Not

People with dementia are people with rich lives and talents to be celebrated

The Good Fight

“To Kill a Mockingbird” was published 65 years ago. What can it teach us about the way we live our lives today?

No Tomorrow

Is the amount of money we save affected by our nationality and the language we speak?
